NEWSLETTER: FEDERAL AND STATE
NOVEMBER 2014

I. CONFRONTATION CLAUSE AND HARMLESS ERROR

McCarley v. Kelly, 759 F3d 535 (6th Cir. 2014) reversed a decision of the district court and granted habeas corpus based on a violation of the Sixth Amendment's Confrontation Clause. In that case, a psychologist testified about statements made to her by a child which implicated the petitioner in a homicide. The child did not testify. The statements were admitted without a limiting instruction. The Court held that the statements made by the child were testimonial hearsay because they were not elicited to resolve an emergency situation. The Court held that admission of the statements had a substantial and injurious effect on the trial process because the testimony was crucial to the prosecution's case, and the rest of the evidence against Petitioner was not overwhelming. This case is close to my Lambert case which remains pending.

II. AMENDMENTS TO SENTENCING GUIDELINES FOR FEDERAL DRUG CRIMES

Federal sentencing guidelines for drug trafficking crimes have been reduced effective November 1, 2014. The reduction is retroactive. The reduction is not guaranteed. The district court judge decides whether or not to reduce the sentence. The 3582(c)(2) package should be prepared professionally to get the best outcome.

III. COMMUTATIONS OF FEDERAL SENTENCES

The Department of Justice is expanding the use of commutation as a device to reduce sentences imposed for drug trafficking crimes. A commutation is not automatic. The opportunity to apply is guaranteed but approval is discretionary. Again, this is a serious opportunity. The application should be prepared professionally to improve chances for a favorable outcome.
